

SEEDING THE FUTURE

Helping money to our schools is a great deed but frankly, there's only so many sausages sizzles (and we're not talking about the cake). On the other hand, offer us a pack of cucumber seeds and we'll be delighted. And that's how we are, over Seeds for the Future's sustainable seed raising kits. This initiative takes a tasty selection of seasonal seeds and pops them into cute, reusable packets for students to sell. Fab news for schools, the environment and mum and dad. Well, even managing the lettuce of Sally's fundraising labour.

the king's return

Gee, not all of us are as dandy with needle and thread as Furious Kingston founders Jim and Mandar, which is why we sit here, slightly agog at the awesomeness of their clothing. Inspired by their son, Kingston aka "The King", the Melbourne couple has packed 20 years of design and fashion experience into a flurry of retro-thirties-gangster-rockabilly pieces for dapper little gentlemen. Phew! You could be forgiven for feeling a little dizzy taking it all in, with vests, waistcoats and slouch pants and monikers like Pimp Coat and Ba-Pa hat to catch one's fancy. Handmade in limited editions in sizes 1-6, it seems fitting that garments harking to times past would re-service old fabrics and so they do, with preloved woollies converted to hipster cardies and vintage shirts turned to ties. Aaah, lovely!
